“ I visually met Uncle Charlie at the celebration of his mother's life at the age of twelve, I also remember the " no colors" sign as I left the city not understanding the fragmented sentence, church was and would have always been his choice of walk as I learned to conclude. I believe my Uncle enjoyed anyone who could cook clean and credit a light bill; it was my pleasure to spend a moment and play a family caregiver at my time of decision making for myself on who would I trust to see me thru my walk of life. Becoming independent takes a strong soul to awake everyday, even the double foot surgery couldn't tell this soul to slow down. I may look back on this memory another night, but I'll pray that the awareness on disabilities and the financial support will always exist.
