“ I remember the day my sister came home with a tiny chocolate baby and hair all over. She would have been the perfect version of a brown baby doll, if there was one in 1978. Her eyes were wide open and she was taking it all in. If you knew Gwen, then you know how she would watch situations and people. She was quiet around new people, but for family and close friends, she was good company, always ready with a joke about what she'd seen on any given day. She spoke the loudest about two things (in her words, my kids and my God) She was fierce about her children, all four of them (3 daughters and 1 son). Even though she always smiling, there were tears under the surface for the two she could not hug and kiss everyday. Gwen was caring and giving, and often too trusting. She looked for the good in people before recognizing the bad. When we were closer than close, she was more my daughter than my niece and I was more her mom than her aunt! Life and people have a way of taking the ones you love, even before their eyes are forever closed. Gwen would never fail to ask me how I was doing and what I was doing. I would say I'm better now and I was just thinking about you. She would laugh and say, yeah right! If I had to answer those questions today, my answers would be very different. I am heart broken but I know she's better now. Even when we didn't speak, my thoughts and prayers always included Gwen, my Little Lady! Keep smiling beautiful and rest easy!!!
