“ Years went by, as they do,
With lives pulling in different directions,
And though we hadn't crossed paths in a while,
Hearing the news still stopped me in my tracks.

*I remember the simpler days,
When we were just kids,
Running through the neighborhood,
Like the world was ours to explore.*

*We grew up, grew apart,
But those memories linger in the background,
Fading a bit, maybe, but never fully gone,
Just like your laugh from way back when.*

*It's strange how life works—
We think we have time,
But suddenly it's too late for catch-ups or reunions,
And all we have are the stories of who we used to be.*

*Rest easy, my old friend.
Though the years kept us apart,
You'll always be part of that chapter,
One that I'll carry with me.*
